Streaker Fails To Set Precedent; Ancient Greek Cited as Originator

By GREGORY J. WILCOX
Editor-in-Chief

Blame it on Pheidippides. When the Athenian runner brought word of Spartan aid to his Greek commander, he was naked. Clothes, he may have reasoned, would slow him down and he had to get to Athens as quickly as possible.

So what might have been history's first streaker died as a result of his efforts.

But streakers have slowed down in recent years.

Tuesday, a man dressed in tennis shoes and socks, jogged at what was described as a leisurely pace from the art building, across the free speech area, stopped and saluted the flag, then trotted over to the Humanities Building where a friend waited with some clothes.

And if those students who saw him thought they were observing a Valley College first, they were mistaken. What appeared to be Valley's initial streaker was actually the second.

As far back as three years ago, when Monarch Hall was being constructed, Captain Wallace V. Gudzus, chief of campus security, received reports that a naked man was running around the unfinished building.

"We were notified that a man wearing only tennis shoes and socks was running around Monarch Hall," Gudzus said, but the ladies who witnessed the incident were so shocked that the only description they could offer was that the man was naked and well built.

Though streaking is equated with fads like goldfish eating and phone booth stuffing, the consequences may be quite severe.

"If someone comes in and files a complaint, then we must try to apprehend the suspect," Gudzus said, "but we won't rush out there with handcuffs."

He indicated that there was a meeting of the minds between his office and the school administration when streaking gained in popularity, and that campus security's attitude was in keeping with their "low profile" policy.

If a streaker is apprehended as the result of a complaint he can be charged under section 314 of the State Penal Code.

The code states: Any person who willfully and lewdly exposes his person or private parts thereof in any public place or in any private place where there are present other persons to be offended or annoyed thereby: is guilty of a misdemeanor.

Panel Chief To Discuss Reform Act

Frank Wilkinson, director of the National Committee Against Repressive Legislation, will speak on repressive legislation today at 11 a.m. in the Free Speech Area.

Phil Spano, president of Big Umbrella, said, "I cancelled Wilkinson's speech last week because I felt that what he had to say was important, and I wanted as many people as possible to hear him. I didn't think many people would show up because of the rain."

Wilkinson will speak on the Criminal Code Reform Act of 1973 which he has called "the most repressive legislative proposal in Nixon's 25-year political career."

Wilkinson said, "There is a possibility that the Watergate affair and the possible impeachment of Nixon, currently in the news spotlight, are drawing attention from the repressive legislation, allowing it to slip past the public unnoticed."

Extravaganza Opens Tonight In 'Guys &amp; Dolls' Production

By NORMA WISMER
Assoc. Fine Arts Editor

Never in the 25-year history of Valley's Theater Arts Department has a production boasted of such record-breaking events as "Guys and Dolls," opening tonight at 8:30 in the Mainstage Theater.

Besides having the largest cast (45), the biggest budget (several thousand dollars), and the greatest number of set changes (17), the musical fable of Broadway includes the strongest contingent of TV and film professionals yet in a single production.

Among these professionals is "Guys and Dolls" choreographer Jesse Salve, a Valley student. Salve has appeared in several Broadway shows as a professional dancer, including "Lost Horizon."

Chris Norris, best known for her part in the film "Summer of '42," will portray Adelaide, a dancer who finally marries her fiancé of 14 years (Nathan Detroit) at the end of the show.

Ms. Norris has also appeared in the TV movie "Mr. and Mrs. Bo Jo Jones" and the soap opera "Edge of Night." Recently, she has completed the filming of "Good Night Jackie" with Wendell Burton.

John Thomas Walker, who portrays Detroit, appeared in a previous Theater Arts production, "The Caretaker," and after this show he will be working on a Universal Studios film "Earthquake," starring Charlton Heston and Ava Gardner.

Merrie Anders, who has a bit part, appeared in the movie "How to Marry a Millionaire." She was brought in for "Guys and Dolls" to complete part of a three-genera-

Council Member Favors Right Of Petition for Every Student

By VANESSA FINAN
Crown Editor

After last Tuesday's Associated Students Executive Council meeting, Vice-President Alex Hampton said that he would initiate further legislation to permit all Valley students the right of being able to sign petitions in support of prospective A.S. candidates.

One week ago, Hampton succeeded in passing through council the motion to allow all Valley students the right to vote in general elections.

"It is my belief that student voting in a general election is a right, not a privilege," said Hampton. However, Hampton stated that for a candidate to run for an office, "They should have more of a stake in the school."

On the grounds of voting in a general Valley College election and the right to sign an aspiring candidates' petition to run for office, Hampton explained that having paid I.D. qualification should be dropped.

During the May 13-16 general elections, students will be able to vote on one of these issues. If passed, the council would submit their recommendation to the Board of Trustees. The proposal of opening the elections to all Valley students is in violation with a district board ruling.

Revisions in Code

During Brian Dennis', commissioner of election, report to council concerning the Election Committee's meeting, he explained that revisions were made in the election codes in hopes of promoting better voting procedures.

The revisions call for no candidates being allowed to campaign within 50 feet of polling booths, paying students who man the booths the current student worker rate fee, and not allowing a student to work in the booths without working a minimum of six hours.

Students interested in working in the polling booths should apply to Dennis, commissioner of elections, in CC102.

Gerardo Perez, commissioner of Chicano ethnic studies, along with the verbal help of Arthur Avila, professor of Spanish, asked council for their support in circulating petitions in support of building what Avila stressed as a much needed college in the North San Fernando Valley area. Petitions are available in CC102.

Coupons Collected

Dennis reported to council that the Patrons Association is collecting any type of merchandise coupons to help fund the meal tickets which are provided for students who are unable to finance their meals while attending school. All

Student Carries Appeal to Board

By WM. L. CRAWFORD
City Editor

Isidor Zwirn, a student recently suspended from classes for nine days, has decided to take his case before the chancellor of the district and the Board of Trustees.

"I've sent a letter to Chancellor Leslie Koltai but have received no answer," said Zwirn. "I now intend to send a letter to the Board of Trustees in order to inform them of the facts of my case."

Zwirn was suspended from attending classes from Feb. 26 to March 8. The reason given for his suspension is that Zwirn was "in violation of state educational code sections 10601.5, 10602, 13559, and board rule 91106.10," said William Lewis, dean of students.

Code Protects Faculty

"The educational code prohibits anyone from abusing a member of the faculty. Anyone doing so is in violation of a state law and guilty of a misdemeanor which is punishable by a fine or imprisonment or both," said Lewis.

"I had received numerous written complaints from faculty members objecting to Zwirn's mistreatment of a faculty member after they had read Zwirn's leaflet condemning Roy Beaumont, professor of philosophy, and his teaching methods," said Lewis. "I then sent out a call notice to Zwirn's teachers requesting that he appear in my office, but he did not reply. After five days, I sent out a letter of suspension according to standard procedure."

Letter Was Summary Action
Lewis said the letter of suspension was a summary action and not a part of due process.

"Zwirn was suspended for reasons of investigation," said Lewis. Zwirn claims he never received a notice to appear in Lewis's office before he was suspended.

Last Thursday, Zwirn spoke to concerned students and faculty members in BS101. He stated what he felt were the points of his case with the administration and with Prof. Beaumont. It was Zwirn's distribution of a leaflet which the administration claims has "ridiculed and abused" Beaumont that initiated the controversy.

Zwirn claimed in his speech Thursday that his "only fight with Prof. Beaumont was not to shut him up about what he taught in class but to open him up to discussion about it."

Listeners Request Excerpts

Concerned members of the audience requested at several instances throughout the speech that Zwirn read the contents of the leaflets he wrote and distributed, but Zwirn did not comply with their requests, saying, "I don't want the issue to become a personal discussion. Justice is at stake here and students have been getting screwed all around."

Near the end of the speech, after several members of the audience had debated a number of points on student rights, Alex Hampton, speaking as a Student Activities Advisory Committee member, said the matter should be brought to the Student Activities Advisory Committee and discussed for clarification.

Students Meet Lewis

Members of the Student Activities Advisory Committee, which is made up of representatives of the students, faculty, and the administration, and deals with student rights on campus, met Tuesday in Lewis' office. The results of that meeting were that a recommendation was made to have a tear-off sheet attached to future call notices, so a teacher would be able to sign it and verify its delivery to the student involved.

On the matter of Zwirn's original leaflets, Prof. Beaumont has said, "I have brought no complaints against him whatsoever. I have taken the material he wrote to my attorney and he said it was actionable, but I don't know if I'll pursue it."

Valley Wins First Place At Tourney

By JUDY KAPLAN
Staff Writer

First place sweepstakes award was presented to Valley's Speech Team at the UCLA Individual Events Tournament last weekend.

Half of the squad went with Coach George Potsic to UCLA, while the other half attended the Northern California Championships in Santa Rosa with Coach Jack Sterk.

Other semi-finalists were Donna Barclay in after-dinner speaking and Stanley Moss in expository speaking. Daryl Demos tied for first place in expository speaking.

Twelve members of the team participated in this tournament for two and four-year colleges. There were 31 schools entered in the invitational.

Five students participated at Santa Rosa where Valley received the fourth place sweepstakes award.

Lynda Wallerstein was a finalist in expository speaking and oral interpretation. She placed first in expository speaking and placed fourth in oral interpretation.

Councilman Probes Priority Problems

By BRUCE GILBERT
Staff Writer

Rapid transit that is practical, government regulation of energy, and reform of campaign laws rank high on Councilman Ernani Bernardi's list of priorities.

Bernardi, representative of the 7th Councilmanic District, told Valley College journalism students last Friday that Los Angeles should develop its present system of public transportation rather than constructing a "fixed rail" network similar to the one in San Francisco.

"A fixed rail system would be limited in the number of people served. It would take 10 to 15 years to complete, and the interest on the bonds would equal $500 million a year."

"The same amount of money for a fixed rail system could be used to triple our present system," stated Bernardi.

Bernardi favors the 25 cent bus fare plan because of the need to make mass transportation appealing.

Bus Plan Favored

"My concern is to make public transportation as accessible as an automobile. Then a sufficient number of people will use it."

Speaking on the oil crisis, Bernardi stressed that it's time for the federal government to take action to ease the situation and the need for communities to institute energy saving programs.

"The Federal Government must take steps to end tax benefits that make it advantageous to refine oil outside of the U.S."

"Oil companies should not be allowed to own gas stations, just as movie studios cannot own motion picture theaters."

Programs Lower Price

"It is a must that cities develop conservation programs if we want to lower the price of energy," stated Bernardi.

Bernardi, who is running for supervisor of the 3rd District, told his audience that he wants a limit on how much money a person can contribute to a candidate, a ceiling on the amount that can be spent during a campaign based on the number of ballots cast in the last election, and the making of campaign loans illegal.

"Any limitation on contributions that does not put a limit on amount spent will not improve the situation."

Spending Limited

"Under my proposal, candidates would be prohibited from spending more than 30 cents per ballot cast in mayoral election and 50 cents per ballot cast in council elections."

"Loans that are repaid through charity dinners would also be prohibited."

"Campaign misuse is 90 percent the fault of the candidate," stated Bernardi.

Senate Head Urges Four-Day Week

By RANDY VENERLOH
Club Editor

Betty Whitten, president of the Valley College Academic Senate, urged the Los Angeles Community College Board of Trustees to adopt a four-day summer school week as a response to the current energy crisis.

Prof. Whitten made the request to the Board at its meeting downtown on Wednesday, March 6, calling the shortened week proposal "logical" in that it allowed students and instructors to save gasoline and the college to save money and energy by having school buildings closed for one day per week.

Mrs. Whitten was joined by John Hubbell, president of the Los Angeles College Teachers Association, who added reasons for implementing the four-day week. Hubbell said many students are late arriving at school because they were in long lines awaiting gasoline. He also told the Board that economically disadvantaged students cannot afford to buy enough gasoline for five weekly trips to school. Hubbell pointed out, however, that some departments must operate on a five-day-per-week basis.

Freedom Code Needs Clarifying

The concept of academic freedom as it applies to the community college has been misinterpreted in terms of its total application.

Various groups, including students, faculty, and the administration have tended to interpret the concept to meet their own specific needs.

Historically, the community, sensing a need for higher education, created institutions to fulfill this need. At this time, guidelines for academic freedom were derived from existing state and local laws. Through application, these guidelines gradually became part of the educational code.

This code, formulated by the governing groups such as a board of trustees and applied by the college administration became a standard for the institution.

The teachers, to promote higher education for the common good and to suppress the furthering of interests in the individual teacher or institution as a whole, then formulated their own set of rules on academic freedom.

These rules must be submitted to the administration for acceptance. The students have interpreted academic freedom in the form of their own code of conduct.

These student codes reinforce the ideal that a college should transmit knowledge and pursue truth for the benefit of the students and the surrounding community.

As each category of rules is formulated, it is aimed at one goal which is a set of rights and responsibilities recognized and understood by all concerned.

Currently, the only effort made in the area of defining academic freedom at Valley has come from the Student Activities Advisory Committee.

This committee is made up of representatives of the administration, faculty and students. The committee serves to coordinate a code of conduct as it applies to student activities.

This means of defining academic freedom has been successful. However, the students, faculty and administration maintain their own individual lists of rights and responsibilities. Although these separate groups' rules are not in opposition to one another, they tend to take divergent approaches toward academic freedom, causing hazy areas which weaken an individual's ability to accurately define the term.

Consequently, representatives for the students, faculty, administration, and the board of trustees should create a forum to establish a standing code of academic freedom which can easily be interpreted by all.

Library Should Be Open Sunday

For the next two Sundays, the community may swarm to Valley College Theater and enjoy a musical comedy with all the nebulous energy consumption entailed in stage production. Every Sunday, members of the community may perform calisthenics in our lighted gym. But on no Sunday may anyone page through volumes of valuable information in our college library. That would be a waste of energy, and defiance of directives from the City of Los Angeles.

If anything at a college is curtailed, it should never be the one thing for which a college primarily exists—education.

The keeping of Sunday library hours entailed no expense for the Community College District. Funds for an engineer, librarian, and student assistants needed during these hours came from the Community Services Fund which also supports Sunday activities in the gym area.

These funds had already been allocated when the college was ordered to cut energy usage by 20 percent.

The library contends it has reduced energy consumption 40 percent, double the requirement. There also is information that more students used the library on Sunday than on Saturday.

If students cannot have the fullest possible access to reference materials, the primary purpose in having a library is defeated.

Moreover, with the energy crisis eliminating most Sunday entertainment, keeping local public service projects available is most important.

The chief reason for the Sunday closing was the cost for personnel at double time. Since money for salaries had already been allocated, this argument hardly seems valid. Considering the Sunday gym activities, this argument seems absurd.

Students have a right to benefit from community services. Therefore, Star strongly urges reinstatement of Sunday library hours. Such action would be more congruous with the college's purpose than keeping the gym open.

All together now — Academic Freedom is . . .

Anti-Abortion View Refuted by Student

Editor:

I hope that every Valley College student, male or female, for or against abortion, has taken the time to study the opposing articles on that subject in last Thursday's Star.

While I was both impressed and fortified in my views by Dale Fink's well stated and concise pro-abortion stance, I cannot help but wonder at the logic and thought process responsible for the opposing stand taken by Jim Wenck.

Among the several flaws in his argument is the idea that "there are 40 tried, tested, and proven methods of birth control and (if a woman) does not wish to conceive there is no reason why she should."

The sad truth is that, for various reasons, these methods remain somewhat elusive to the younger girl and, as one engaged in the journalistic trade will have to admit, tragic mistakes do have a habit of occurring. Need I remind Wenck of the recourse available then for either party?

I think not. Dale Fink has admirably outlined all that for him.

In his "final analysis" Wenck becomes even more astounding. In reminding us that "the world doesn't have enough Monets, Chopins, Gauguins, Lincolns, Hemingways, Kennedys, or Christs," he pre-assumes that only admirable individuals, and all of them men, evolve from the avoidance of abortion.

If this is how Jim Wenck draws his conclusion, I doubt I should have to elaborate on my conclusions.

Coeds 'Tune Up' to Automotive Repair

By JANET SVENDSEN
Feature Editor

For coeds who think that the term, "fuel line," just refers to a consequence of the alleged gasoline shortage, or that "drive shaft" is the title of a new movie about a Black detective, Valley has initiated the Women's Automotive Repair Workshop. It was established strictly for women to afford them a fair knowledge of automotive mechanics, maintenance, and repair.

Realization of the unit-free course, funded by Associated Women Students, can be largely credited to Carolyn Kaiser, AWS president. A vivacious individual, Ms. Kaiser regards the workshop as the fulfillment of her most coveted ambition in that office.

"When I ran for AWS president, there were a number of changes I wanted to see made," she said. "My foremost plan was to set up an auto workshop for women, because one of the biggest ways that guys take advantage of them is through automobile repair. I know, because I've been ripped off several times by mechanics. This class is practical for women."

$29 Billion Estimated
Ms. Kaiser's cause is definitely a worthwhile one. It was recently estimated that Americans dole out more than $29 billion in one year to service and repair about 110 million vehicles. About $10 billion of this sum is lost to incompetent mechanics who effect inadequate or superfluous repairs for inflated prices.

Ms. Kaiser pointed out that if the program (the first of its kind at Valley) receives a sufficient turnout of coeds, it will be offered again later this semester and/or in the fall. So far, the class seems to have attracted a reasonable number of students, totaling 15 at the class' third meeting, this week. The Women's Automotive Repair Workshop meets in Bungalow 78 from 2 to 4 p.m. on Tuesdays, for a period of five weeks.

Class Taught

The class' instructor, Ken Moses, 29, is a close friend of Ms. Kaiser. An affable and qualified man, he has been a mechanic for almost 10 years. His auto repair class is the first one he has ever taught.

Explaining why the automotive workshop is for women only, Moses said, "If I had a mixed class, the women in it probably wouldn't feel free to ask any questions that came to mind, because the men in it would put them down. Any questions my students ask are valid, though, as far as I'm concerned."

A typical workshop session involves an informal, hour-long lecture by Moses concerning auto parts and their functions, locations, and interrelations. Upkeep and repair pricing are discussed, as well as the physics and chemistry of engines, carburetors, spark plugs, etc.

The second hour of class time is usually spent out on the blacktop, with the students hunched beneath the raised hood of a car, working with its mechanical components.

Interest Prevails

Those attending the class appear to be genuinely interested in what they are there to learn, including how to determine their mileage (and increase it), and how to put gas in a car. Most will complete the course knowing how to change a car's oil, oil filter, spark plugs, points, and tires. If these skills are mastered, it is likely that some of the intricacies of the "tune-up" procedure will be covered.

Students' reasons for attending the class are very similar.

"I am taking it so that when I go to get my car repaired and a mechanic tells me that it needs a certain part, I'll know for sure if it really needs it," said one.

Another admitted, "I don't know anything about cars before I took this class . . . I felt so helpless. Pretty soon, though, I'll be able to make minor repairs on my car."

Future Looks Favorable

Lois McCrackin, Coordinator of Student Affairs and sponsor of AWS, has gone to the Women's Automotive Repair Workshop sessions and feels that the course is meeting the high expectations originally set for it.

"I think the program has been most successful," she said. "The women in the class have a degree of knowledge and sophistication about cars that I didn't know they had. There is no reason why women cannot become as knowledgeable about cars as men."

Mrs. McCrackin added that if the Automotive Workshop idea continues to prove successful, the AWS may institute an ongoing series of workshops and seminars based on the pilot program now in progress.

Curiosity Present

As they strive to unravel the mysteries of distributors, generators, fuel pumps, and drive shafts, the women attending the auto workshop maintain an air of tranquility tempered with curiosity. Perhaps this is because the course is impossible to fail, or it is due to the patience of Moses, the instructor. If a concept is not understood, he goes over it again more slowly and simply until it is.

Moses said that he will give his students a test covering the course during the workshop's last meeting.

"But instead of giving my students grades, I will give an auto safety device to the person who gets the best test score. Then we'll all go on a tour of the Van Nuys General Motors plant."

SURROUNDED BY NOW-FAMILIAR cylinders, batteries, and coils, is Phyllis Robinson, one of the 15 women enrolled in Valley's first Women's Automotive Repair Workshop. Women now have the chance to gain a "fair knowledge" of automotive mechanics, maintenance, and repair.

Sexual Revolution Fosters Life Style

Probably the most significant development of the sexual revolution is the amount of candor with which people now treat sexual relationships. As a result, an old life style, "living together," has been resurrected. In upcoming issues, Star will examine the positive and negative aspects of this alternative to marriage.

A few months after I had been in California, I helped a friend and his girlfriend move into their first apartment. It seemed the practical thing to do, since she was living in North Hollywood and he lived in Northridge, and she spent each night at his place.

Looking at all her cosmetics and whatnot, I was a bit cynical.

"I'll never live with a girl," I told my friend. "There would just be too much clutter."

For several months, I found eating to be an adventure. I was drawing unemployment on my service earnings and trying to stretch $232 a month between rent, food, and beer. Back then, gas was still an incidental.

I finally found employment and when I received my first paycheck, it went for groceries, most of which spoiled on the shelf or rotted as leftovers. Food processors appear to assume that one never shops for "one."

It turned out that I was throwing away more food than I was eating, so I tried dining out all the time. That proved to be just as expensive, and frequenting restaurants alone tends to breed paranoia and an inferiority complex.

What it amounts to is the adage from the sexual dark ages, "Two can live as cheaply as one," is valid. Elders, with a foreboding tone, used to recite that proverb to young people to try to discourage premature marriage, but in these times of multiple crisis, it rings hollow.

This points to a strong advantage for sharing an apartment with your girlfriend.

The same $165 a month rent for a one-bedroom apartment will take care of two people, just as it will for one. So if the rent is divided, $1980 a year becomes $990, with the money saved to be used for other things. It could be a trip to Europe, a new stereo, or tuition for school, but the fact remains that living together is almost $1,000 a year cheaper.

GREGORY
J. WILCOX

Editor-in-Chief

If you have to pay utilities, one more person is not going to use that much more energy; in fact, it may cut usage in half, since that person will not be paying for his or her separate apartment.

Of course, there is a price for such savings. When you live with the opposite sex, you relinquish some freedom that you would have with a roommate of the same sex. If a man and woman approach living together with a mature attitude, and the relationship is to be more than platonic, then some of the same responsibilities prevail that would prevail in a marriage.

Granted, when two people who are just living together break up, the man isn't strapped with alimony, but if two people are living together because they're in love, breaking up won't be any more emotionally easier than getting a divorce.

Though sexual gratification might have as much to do with living together as economic savings, the social acceptance of birth control has just about negated the possibility of unwanted children. Pregnancy may be encountered, but society is adapting almost as it has towards birth control.

What it boils down to are individuals' rights to choose which path they want to follow. They can get married, but some surveys point out that for every marriage in California, there is a divorce and divorces cost money. This could discourage some people. They can live alone or with a roommate of the same sex, or they can live with their boyfriend or girlfriend.

REFLECTIONS

'Junk Mail' Preponderance Overjoys Curious Columnist

Nearly every day, I find one or two unsolicited letters in my mailbox from business concerns trying to lure me into buying or trying something they feel sure I cannot be without. Miraculously, they can manage to let me have their product for a fraction of its true worth.

These letters are a small joy in my life, and I look forward to getting them for several reasons.

First, they are extremely complimentary, revealing that my name has been selected from thousands because of my obviously superior intellect and good taste. They trust me the honor of seeing and buying goods the general public has not even glimpsed yet.

Judging by the salutations on the letters, I can count as my good friends dozens of high-income, big-bore business executives and modern housewives all over the country.

Even more important, and this strikes right to the heart—they trust me! They answer my needs without question, money, or even a peek at my credit rating. In our money-conscious society, this is trust and good-will at its loftiest.

Moreover, this junk mail gives me an excuse to take time off from my busy schedule, sit down, relax, and read.

Junk mail illustrations are a special delight, no doubt because the companies spare no expense in making them just that.

Multi-color spreads unfold to six or eight feet of dazzling panorama, with pictures scattered over both sides. This affords a pleasurable escape from the humdrum duties of life.

After reading these fascinating pieces of correspondence, I feel duty-bound to thank the sender for his concern. And I do write, at least to the ones who enclose a postage-paid envelope.

An insurance company was so concerned with my well-being that it insisted on giving me full hospitalization coverage and a death benefit, without a physical examination, for pennies a day.

I replied to this with a heartfelt, "Thanks. I'll keep you in mind if I feel anything coming on."

(Editor's Note: This is the second of a series of articles investigating the parking situation at Valley.)

Although Campus Security may issue as many as 100 parking citations a day, there is no guarantee that anywhere near that number will be enforced.

In fact, Captain Wallace V. Gudzus, chief of Campus Security, said his office does not attempt to enforce campus cites until a student has three violations on file in the security office.

"When we find a repeated offender we check our records to determine if he or she has three tickets or more," Gudzus said, "and if they do we start to track them down."

Determining if the offender is a student is the first, and according to Gudzus, the simplest part of the procedure.

Campus Security maintains a file of all students who have a paid I.D. card and if they don't find the offender in this file a call is placed to the State Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) in Sacramento.

"We have a direct line to the state DMV," Gudzus said, "and it only takes about five minutes to get the information."

When Campus Security determines the status of the offender, his or her name is sent to Bruno Cicotti, coordinator of student affairs, and Cicotti's office issues a "call notice" to the student.

Both Gudzus and Cicotti agree that this is where the system bogs down.

"It takes a lot of time to just get in touch with the student," Cicotti said, "and there is no guarantee he will acknowledge the notice."

Process Takes Time

Cicotti said that a clerk from his office must go to the administration building to check the student's class schedule. A notice informing the student to report to Cicotti's office is then sent to all of the student's instructor.

"Just checking the class schedule takes a good 45 minutes," Cicotti said, "and we still might not make contact with the student."

If this method fails, Cicotti personally tries to get in touch with the student to discuss the problem.

Computer Discussed

A traffic court, headed by Peg Foster, Associated Students chief justice, may be convened to hear the student's case. The offender may pay the fines, buy a paid I.D., in which case his tickets are voided, or be restricted to parking in lot G. If he still parks illegally, Cicotti said his car may be towed away.

"In 1971 we had 1,000 of these cases, and there just isn't enough time to take care of all of them," Cicotti said.

This problem can be solved, Cicotti and Gudzus agree, by having students fill out an IBM during enrollment.

"Every individual enrolling would fill out an IBM card with his license number, owner's address, and schedule," Gudzus explained, "and when we had to contact a student, we could just go to a computer read out."

However, Cicotti expressed doubts that the administration would adapt a plan calling for more cards, since they have the enrollment procedure down to one card.

Solution Aired

"It is possible to get the enrollment procedure over in 15 to 20 minutes if a student knew what he is doing," Cicotti said, "and though the IBM card plan sounds good it will probably get a no from the administration."

Not only would another card be added to the enrollment packet, but Dan Means, acting dean of admissions, said the cost of such a program would probably be prohibitive.

"Keypunching 20,000 plus cards is an expensive process," Means said, "and then if we punched that card, other groups would want a card punched."

He also said that the administration worked for several years to get the enrollment process down to one card and that adding another would be defeating that process.

(Next: What happened to the parking gates.)

BUGS, GREMLINS, PINTOS, and Mustangs are corralled in Valley's parking lots, many without their own stalls. By mid morning, students cruise the area in search of an empty space. Those who squeeze the over-sized, domestic varieties into the triangles at the ends of the rows create maneuvering problems.

Rape Clinic Claims Judo Top Defense

By GREG ROBERTS
Staff Writer

Rape has reached epidemic proportions, Betty Jetter, president of the San Fernando Valley division of the National Organization of Women (NOW), told a Valley audience last Friday.

It is the cruelest form of female exploitation, Ms. Jetter declared at a rape clinic lecture in Monarch Hall during Women's International Day.

Ms. Jetter said that NOW has established a Rape Crisis Center and a Rape Hot Line (213-653-6333).

The myth that "all women want to be raped," Ms. Jetter said, is false.

Reforms Demanded

Ms. Jetter and English instructor Penny Pollard agreed that "rape is a form of mass terror functioning to keep women in their place."

Ms. Jetter said that NOW is demanding legal reforms including changes in Section 260 of the California Penal Code which outlaws rape.

NOW is also supporting a reform bill in the California Legislature sponsored by Assemblyman Bob Moretti of Van Nuys.

Clinic Includes Exhibit

The rape clinic included a self-defense exhibition by members of the Valley Martial Arts Club.

Members of the Martial Arts Club showed the audience various karate kicks, punches, and judo throws.

"We advocate karate training and other self-defense tactics being taught women in P.E. classes in junior and senior high school," said Ms. Jetter.

With the proper force, speed, and self-confidence, a woman has a good chance of fending off a rapist, Miss Nutall advised.

tion family of grandmother, her daughter, and the daughter's daughter. In reality, the three are related. Ms. Anders, her mother, and her daughter are students at Valley.

Other members of the cast include Addison Randall as Sky Masterson, Teresa Candido as Sarah, David Arias as Nicely-Nicely, Mike Lieberman as Big Julie, Julian Wick as Arvide, and Charles Shapiro as Benny Southstreet.

"The cast is large, but that's only part of it," said Ben Sprecher, stage manager. "There are 40 people on the crew, 25 musicians, and four directors. This is also the first time for scene changes in a play."

John Larson is the director, Hank Pellin is the musical director, and Irwin Pope is the conductor.

"Guys and Dolls" will run for eight performances. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m. for tonight, tomorrow, and for March 15, 16, 21, 22, and 23. Curtain time will be 7:30 p.m. for March 17 and 24.

General admission is $2, $1.50 for students, and free with a paid I.D. Tickets will be sold at the box-office the night of the performance or may be purchased in advance from the Business Office. Reservations may be made by phoning 781-1200, ext. 318. Reservations must be picked up at least 30 minutes prior to curtain time.

Council...

World College Pinball championship elimination rounds will be held on Thursday, March 21, at 11 a.m. in the cafeteria's pinball area, explained Jim Wenck, AMS president. Sign-up sheets are available in CC100.

Les Sloane, commissioner of public relations, announced the club marquee, located between Life Science and the Men's Gym buildings, will be operative next Monday and will be posting continuous information pertinent to club activities.

After 10 minutes of debate discussion, council passed the motion to provide the Theater Arts Department with $160 in order to provide a buffet for student TA workers during their hosting of the three-day High School Play Festival.

By DALE FINK
Managing Editor

In the Fall '63, Associated Women Students observed Women's Week with tea and a fashion show in the cafeteria. The festivities climaxed with a Sadie Hawkins' dance.

The intention of Women's Week has since shifted from entertainment to increasing awareness of current issues regarding women.

Last Friday, International Women's Day featured seminars entitled "The Twice Oppressed: Minority Women," "Rape: Who's the Criminal?" and "What Can Men Do to Liberate Women?" The last of these was conducted by an all-male panel.

Media at Fault

"Men cannot liberate women," said Pat Allen, associate professor of sociology. "Men have been socialized to regard women as inferior beings. But so have women."

Ms. Allen stressed that socialization begins the moment one leaves the womb through conversation and the media.

"When a parent reads a book to a child, this is a heavy time for socialization," Ms. Allen said. "There are few children's books on the market which are not sexist."

Citing a content analysis of "better" children's books, the recent Caldecott award winners, Ms. Allen stated, "The ratio is one girl for every eight boys in stories or pictures. The boys have the adventures. They float through the air, invent things, discover unique places, and become heroes."

"And what do girls do? They cook and be rescued! It is the white boy that helps and rescues everybody." Sexism is ingrained at an early age, not only through books, but also through children's television shows, Ms. Allen claims.

Advertising Blamed

Viewing advertisement as another facet conveying sexism, Ms. Allen asked, "How does a woman win in life? By losing. Lose at anything intellectual or athletic, and a woman will win her only portrayed goal in life—a man."

Regarding streaking, Ms. Allen said, "Men are also being exploited by the system. Streaking is a way of saying 'Stop the world, I want to get off.'"

We challenge you.

Our Officer Selection Officers are looking for a few good college men—maybe 3 out of 100—who will make good Marine officers. If you're one of them, we'll give you a chance to prove it during summer training at Quantico, Virginia.

Our program is Platoon Leaders Class, PLC. With ground, air and law options. You might even qualify for up to $2,700 to help you through college. But if money is all you're looking for, don't waste your time.

The challenge is leadership. If you want it, work for it. If you've got it, show us. It's one hell of a challenge. But we're looking for one hell of a man.

Monarchettes Seize Pair of Triumphs

By DEREK LAWSON
Staff Writer

The Valley College Monarchettes began a full week of competition with big victories by the volleyball and softball teams.

The volleyball team, under the direction of Coach Dieder Stark, played Golden West College in a non-league game and defeated their A and AA teams.

The A team swept all three games by scores of 15-12, 15-9, and 15-9, respectively. Top players for Valley were Teresa Carmichael, Dorien Dreher, and Susan Hori who scored most of Valley's points with their strong serving.

The AA team had to come from behind in game three to defeat Golden West, 16-14, to win the match, 2-1. After winning the first game 15-9, the Monarchettes lost the second game, 2-15.

"This had to have been one of the toughest teams we will have to face all year," said Coach Stark. "Carol Piechocinski, Karen Honey, Maya Wolfson, and Kathy Borawski all had strong games. I still feel that floor play can improve. We are still weak in receiving the serve from the opposite team."

Softball

On Monday Toni Patu had a no-hitter going for five innings against Pierce until the Brahmas broke it up with a scratch sixth inning single.

Miss Patu struck out seven batters in her finest performance of the season as the ladies blanked the previously unbeaten Brahmas, 3-0.

Swimming

The swim team began their season by taking part in the SCCC-IAC Relays at Ventura College. With teams from 13 colleges competing, Valley held their own by placing third in the freestyle relay, fourth in the medley relay, and two fifth places in the 100 butterfly and 200 freestyle relays. The teams made up of Debbi Christie, Mary Mulle, Marcy Flory, Mary Pat Thompson, and Cindy Schilling all played a big part in Valley's fine showing.

Tennis

The Monarchettes tennis team had their problems last week by dropping two matches to Bakersfield and Pierce College. The doubles team of Cindy Cosdon and Carol Cadigan won their match in two sets against Bakersfield.

Golfers Have Power Problem

Coach Charlie Mann's linkers are suffering from shortages.

In a school of 20,000 students, Mann can't find enough golfers to field the entire six-man team.

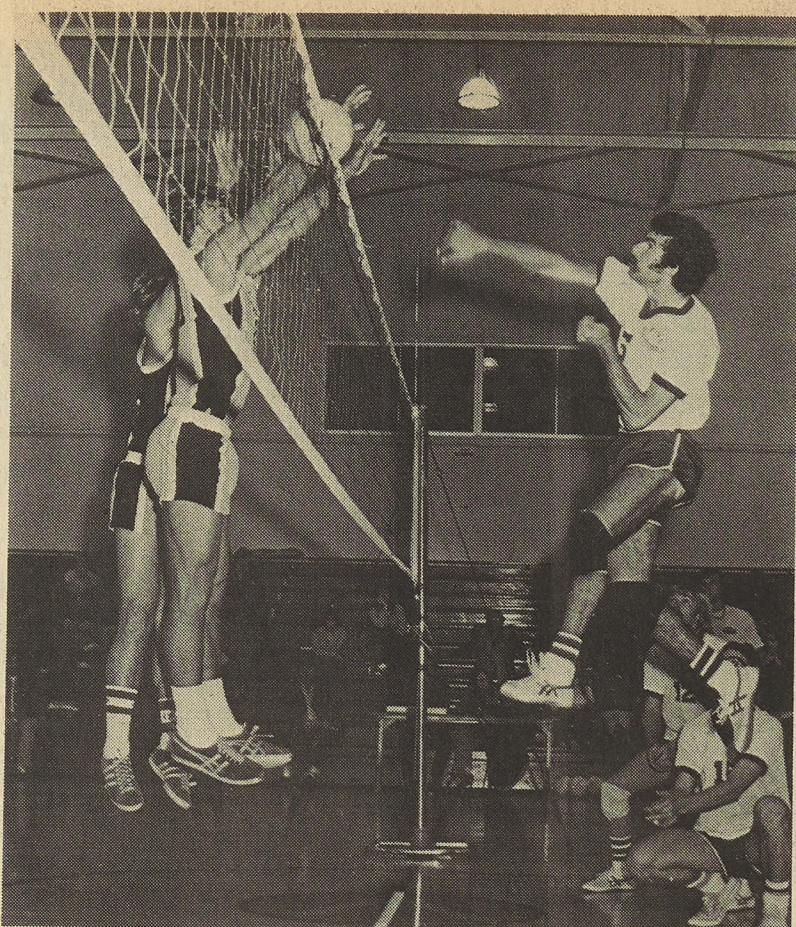

While posting a 2-7 record, the Monarchs have only played with a full roster once.

Against Mt. San Antonio, Jim Gillyooly and Doug Lagerson had excellent rounds to outscore their opponents, 12-6.

Teammates Joe Tanner and Ron Rothstein both carded in the low 80's, but the four could not come up with enough points to carry the team.

"The four golfers that have played for us have done very well," said Mann. "We can still be competitive if a few players I was counting on decide to join the team."

The Monarchs will tangle with the College of the Sequoias at the Plaza Golf Course this afternoon at 1 p.m.

SPIKE THREE, YOU'RE OUT!—When Monarch volleyballer Tech Friedman goes high, he means business as he slams home a point against El Camino defenders last Friday night. Friedman guided the Monarchs to a 3-2 victory over the visiting Warriors.

Warriors Defeat Spikers; Renegades Next on Slate

Wet weather Friday blessed Coach Nick Giovannazzo's spikers with an extra four days rest for Tuesday's confrontation with the title-conscious El Camino Warriors, but the Monarchs still showed up wet and went home as drips as they were trounced, 88-48.

The Monarchs turned in "blue-chip" performances in the sprints and creditable exercises in the distance events, but they failed to provide a competitive field unit which ultimately rested the Lions on their death bed.

In the field events, the Monarchs tallied a measly 11 points out of a possible 54, letting the host Warriors sweep to victories in the high jump, pole vault, and shot put.

Oddly enough, the trio of Dan Arnold, Leroy Smith, and Wayne Tweddell combined their efforts in the discus to post a surprising sweep over the Warriors.

Rain may not be the forecast tomorrow in Bakersfield, but the Monarchs can expect showers when they meet the perennial state champion Renegades. Starting time is 2:30 p.m.

Odd or Even, Baseballers Have Gas for Tough Slate

By ED KASPER
Sports Editor

Today may be an even day for those who are waiting in line to buy gas, but for Coach Ed Bush and his Monarch baseball team, it's just another afternoon in an extremely odd week.

Rain last week washed out the scheduled Metropolitan Conference opener against El Camino on Thursday and Saturday's tilt in Bakersfield, forcing Bush and his batsmen into a grueling schedule which finds them playing four games this week and next.

After clipping Long Beach 4-2 Tuesday afternoon to claim their initial victory of the '74 Metropolitan Conference campaign, the Monarchs play host to Pasadena this afternoon in their third game of the week in as many days. They will tangle with cross-town rival Pierce on Saturday at 1:30 p.m. in the Brahma ballpark.

On Tuesday the team travels to Torrance for a 2:30 p.m. game against El Camino before traveling to Bakersfield on Wednesday for a make-up contest of last Saturday's postponed game.

Bush is confident that the Monarchs won't run out of gas during their hectic two-week schedule.

"I don't see any stopping us now," said Bush following the victory over Long Beach. "The schedule puts a bit of a crimp on us, but all the guys have shown a great deal of confidence in themselves and we know we're hitting the ball."

There had been a question early in the week as to whether or not the busy two-week slate would put a drain on the Monarch pitching staff.

But Robert Castillo and Greg Broomis put an end to those rumors.

Castillo, the former All-City star from Lincoln High School, put in a full nine innings work, yielding six hits and striking out 10, but he had to give way to his high school and Monarch teammate Broomis, who came on in the tenth inning to set down the final eight batters and claim his second victory of the year.

Former Monarch Heinbechner Killed

Former Valley College and California Angel hurler Bruce Heinbechner was killed late Sunday night in a head-on automobile crash in Palm Springs.

Heinbechner, 23, was returning to the team hotel of the Angels when his 1966 Porsche apparently crossed the center line of Highway 111, slamming into an oncoming vehicle.

The one-time Poly High School star pitched for the Monarchs during the 1969 season, compiling a 4-3 pitching record and batting a healthy .375.

He joined the Angels' Salt Lake City club in 1972 and had been considered a leading candidate to make the squad's major league staff this season as a reliever.

Track Clinic Slated

Another track and field clinic will be held this Saturday at 9 a.m. with Eagle Rock High School's track coach Dan Wyatt discussing high jumping technique.

For the second straight year, Long Beach City College had to settle for second place honors in the state basketball championship.

Representing the Metropolitan Conference, the Vikings, behind first year head coach Bill Fraser's guidance, fell 90-73 to a tough Mark Landsberger led Hancock College.

Landsberger, from Minnesota, threw in 25 points against the Vikings and was voted the tournament MVP.

Dan Frost and Dave Hillman were named to the all-tournament team for Long Beach.

Art Exhibit Spans California Careers

By MIKE HUDSON
Assist. Fine Arts Editor

Five Musicians Survey Sanity Through Music

By NORMA WISMER
Assoc. Fine Arts Editor

"Blue Heaven is not the Carpenters, James Brown, Bela Bartok, or Albert Ayler," said David Wolff, guitar player for the group. "Blue Heaven is not, to the dismay of some, composed of sadists, perverts, or junkies. Blue Heaven is not, to the dismay of others, cute or wholesome. Blue Heaven is five musicians who view sanity with admiration and distrust."

Wolff's words reflect the way the group feels about their search for reality through their music.

Group Evokes Goldrush
What the group is, however, can be determined March 19 at 11 a.m. in the Free Speech Area. (Hint: Think of an 1849 goldrush saloon with brass spittoons, mountain men, and a classy lady.)

The classy lady is Bonnie Murray, who strums the guitar, and writes authentic modern folksongs. Ms. Murray played the cello as a child, played in country bars on Highway 395 in her teens, and met the rest of the group in the mountains.

Larry Robinson plays guitar and sings.

Gig Inspired Him
Grant Johnson, pianist, comes from a family where everyone plays an instrument. Reluctant to try music as a career, he finally gave in to it when a Les McCann gig inspired him.

Wolff played with the "Peanut Butter Conspiracy," "The Psychedelic Rangers" (training ground for the Doors John Densmore and Robbie Kreiger), John Lee Hooker, and "Jesse Wolff and Whings."

Fred Staehle, on drums, is a New Orleans-born percussionist and played drums with Al Hirt and recently with Dr. John.

Artists Reflect Scene
"We tried to choose artists that are heavily into the California scene as it has developed over the last few years," Van Proyen said. "The students who worked on the project, Greg Wahlmyer, Carolyn Le Vesque, Mark Ross, and myself looked at literally hundreds of works before we came up with the artists picked for the show."

All together, the student committee chose six artists for the show. They are William T. Wiley of San Francisco, Joan Tanner of Santa Barbara, Walter Gabrielson of Pasadena, Buster Wingo, Matsumi Kenemitsu, and Ynez Johnston, all of Los Angeles.

Works Show Progression
Each artist will be represented by five works. The works will span the various periods in the progression of the artist's career.

Wiley and Kanemitsu have participated in art shows all over the world. Kanemitsu just recently completed an art show at Jodi Scully, an art gallery on La Cienega Boulevard in West Los Angeles.

Each of the works will be framed and insured for $15,000.

Gamblers and a Salvation Army Mission are the dichotomous subjects dealt with in the musical production "Guys and Dolls," being presented tonight at 8:30 in the Mainstage Theater by Valley's Drama Department.

The production, in the making since Jan. 10, breaks a number of records in the 25-year history of Valley. It has the largest cast, the biggest budget, the strongest contingent of television and film professionals, and the most set changes.

Bet Made for Crap Game

John Larson, instructor in theater arts, is the director; Hank Fellin, music director of the Opera Workshop, is the musical director; Jesse Salve, Valley student, is the choreographer, and Irwin Pope, instructor in music, is the conductor.

The plot revolves around a $1,000 bet made by Nathan Detroit, a gambler, with Sky Masterson, a fellow gambler, in order for Detroit to secure money for a place to continue his floating crap game. The bet is that Masterson cannot talk a Mission girl, Sarah, into going to Havana with him. Masterson succeeds, however, and he and Sarah fall in love.

Meanwhile, in Sarah's absence, Detroit holds his crap game in the Mission. When Masterson and Sarah return to New York and Sarah discovers the game, she thinks that Masterson was part instigator in the matter and breaks up with him temporarily.

Masterson, not wanting to admit he's lovesick, tells Detroit he has not succeeded in taking Sarah to Havana and has lost the bet.

Dice Have No Dots

The leads in the play include Addison Randall as Masterson, Teresa Candido as Sarah, John Walker as Detroit, Chris Norris as Adelaide, David Arias as Nicely-Nicely, Julian Wick as Arvide, and Mike Lieberman as Big Julie, a gambler from Chicago who uses dice with no dots on them.

Some of the songs in the show include "I'll Know When My Love Comes Along," "Luck Be a Lady," "Sit Down, You're Rockin' the Boat," "Marry the Man Today," and the finale, "Guys and Dolls."

Besides tonight, the play will run tomorrow and on March 16, 21, 22 and 23 at 8:30 p.m., and on March 17 and 24, both Sundays, at 7:30 p.m.

Concert Features Brass, Woodwinds In Eight Selections

Eight works will be performed by the Los Angeles Valley College Wind Ensemble under the direction of Irvin Pope, instructor in music, today at 11 a.m. in Monarch Hall.

This week's Campus Concert will feature both original works and transcriptions for wind ensemble. The program will open with Frank Erickson's "Toccata for Band." The second number will be an arrangement of Johann Sebastian Bach's aria, "When Thou Art Near."

Following the aria will be "Suite for Trumpet: Introduction, Theme for Morning, March for Freedom" by Al Cobine; "Fanfare and Scherzo" by Frederick Ashe, and "Chorale March and Fugue" by Alexandre Guilmant, arranged by C. Righter.

"Dance Variations on an Obscure Theme" by Herbert Hazeman uses a main theme to feature each of the band's musical sections. All groups join for the end.

Carpool Committee Formed by Council

By JUDY KAPLAN
Staff Writer

A computer carpool committee will be formed as the result of a motion "to create a committee facilitating computer commuter carpools at Valley." The motion was unanimously passed by the Inter-Organizational Council (IOC) last week.

Gene Scott, Computer Club representative, asked that all students interested in computer carpools come to B57 and fill out an application which includes the coordinates of the house and the approximate hours that the student arrives at Valley and leaves.

"The whole idea of the program is to get people together that live close and find out if they want to pool together," said Scott.

Scott stressed that the program needs volunteers to help key punch the data.

A motion made by Peggy Frank, TAE representative, stating "that participation in the carpool program be limited to holders of paid ID's" was tabled for further research until the next IOC meeting.

representative, asked for IOC's support to endorse the building of a new community college in the Northeast Valley.

She said the population is large enough to support another college, and that by building a college in that area, these people will not have to commute as far out of the area as now.

Support letters will be available at the flagpole this week for the students to endorse.

Commissioner of Public Relations Les Sloane announced that there is a new club marquee to be used by all clubs announcing their forthcoming events. The marquee is located between the Life Science Building and the Men's Gym, facing the Business-Journalism Building.

Clubs Bring Speakers to Campus, Beauty Contest Plans Underway

The ARMENIAN STUDENT ASSOCIATION again reminds students that Valley College will have a beauty contest to highlight their activities for the spring semester. Yenok Adjoyan, president of ASA, said the deadline for applications is April 24 at 8 p.m. in CC100, the office of Student Affairs. He urged all prospective candidates to apply and promised it would be one of the most exciting events of the semester at Valley.

The NEWMAN CLUB thanks all faculty, students, and visitors who came by the organization's Club Day booth, said the NEWMAN CLUB's officers. The club wishes to express its pleasure at serving and entertaining its guests, and according to President Ron Smith, it plans a canned food drive along with parties and other social activities in the future.

The YOUNG DEMOCRATS have announced they are hosting Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, a candidate for California governor, to speak on a yet undetermined date in May. Debbie Tuller, club president, said the club will set up a table on campus in approximately two weeks which will distribute campaign literature and persuade students to work on a political campaign during the current election year.

TAU ALPHA EPSILON, the Valley College honor student society, invites everyone to view silverware patterns of the future, says the club's recording secretary. The designs will be displayed in the Cafeteria Conference Room from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday, March 20-21. Students and others attending may then give their opinions of the displays.

The second of three seminars on the Middle East and the energy shortage will be presented Tuesday at 11 a.m. in P100, sponsored by the HILLEL COUNCIL. The series is titled "The Energy Crisis, The Middle East, And You"; the seminar for Tuesday is "Oil and the Middle East: Facts and Myths." The speaker is Harvey Schecter, assistant director of the B'nai B'rith Anti-Defamation League for the Pacific Southwest region. The final seminar will be in early April.

Today, HILLEL will feature Charles Vernoff to discuss "Jewish and Islamic Mysticism" and the audience may participate. Vernoff, instructor of religious studies at the University of California at Santa Barbara, will speak at 11 a.m. in CC212.

The VALLEY COLLEGE REPUBLICANS, contrary to popular belief, are "alive and well," Mark Rosenthal, president, says. Rosenthal announced that the REPUBLICANS will feature a series of speakers to address students on the energy crisis for several weeks. Students interested in joining the club are urged by Rosenthal to attend the meetings on Tuesdays at 11 a.m. in CC204.

STUDENT NURSES ASSOCIATION OF VALLEY COLLEGE will present "Nobody's Victim," a new movie about the art of self-defense for women. "Nobody's Victim" will be shown twice, the first presentation at 11:30 a.m. and the second at noon, both tomorrow in Monarch Hall. Admission of 50 cents will be charged.

ASSOCIATED WOMEN STUDENTS meet again at 1:30 p.m. in CC104.

The INTER-ORGANIZATIONAL COUNCIL, the group comprised of all club representatives, meets today at noon in CC104.

Animal Doctor Says Competition's Tight

By RANDY YENVERLOH
Club Editor

There is an old covenant between man and animals which provides that man is responsible for animals and their health, a veterinarian told an audience at an Occupational Exploration Series lecture Tuesday in BSc100.

Dr. Ronald K. Porter, a specialist in animal medicine, said that a high level of interest in insuring the good health of animals is the reason why there are 10 times as many applicants for veterinarian schools as there are actual accepted students. Porter emphasized that there are many good veterinarian schools in Canada as well as in the United States.

"You have such a feeling of achievement that you did something to help someone," he said, bearing out the idea that animal medicine is a very rewarding field. "Opportunities for those who make it are unlimited."

Among the rigid requirements for veterinarians, Porter explained, are a 3.5 minimum grade point average, high motivation, and an ability "to get along with people." Those who cannot get along with others should consider a laboratory position, he advised.

Now you can protect yourself against muggers, rapists and worse with this amazing new whistle. Wear it as a necklace or carry it as a key chain. Its long-range penetrating shrill brings help in a hurry. The next dark night (that's tonight!) you'll feel a lot safer just knowing you have the greatest protection in the world. Gives obscene phone callers a shrilling earful, too. GET IT BEFORE YOU HAD IT!

Parole Agent, Food Editor Speak Tuesday

Betsy Baisley, food editor of the L.A. Times who was originally scheduled to appear March 5, will speak on her career Tuesday at 11 a.m. in C100. Miss Baisley will describe opportunities in her field, an occupation which combines home economics with journalism.

Jim Roth, parole agent, will describe the field of corrections today at 11 a.m. to lead off another week of Occupational Exploration Series lectures. Roth, an instructor in criminology and delinquency at Valley College, will be speaking in BSc100.

Roth has served with the State Department of Corrections as an adult parole officer since 1968 and has taught his classes during the evening at Valley for the last three years.

After Roth, in BSc100, city planning will be explained by one of the persons who assisted in planning the City of Burbank. George Nony, Burbank's director of planning and development, was educated at Union College in New York, the University of Miami, the University of Arizona in Tucson, and East Los Angeles College.
